All the Indonesian islands are realistically reproduced in a central lake and around the lake are pavilions to represent the 27 provinces in Indonesia. In the afternoon, head over to Ancol Bay City for a little shopping at the Art Market, an outdoor art market where you will find a varied collection of Indonesian handicrafts and souvenirs on sale; before continuing on with a visit to the National Museum of Jakarta – built in 1862 and the largest of its kind in South East Asia, the museum features a collection of over 140,000 artifact and artwork, spanning from Prehistoric Indonesia to the Independence era of 1945.
